

tai.draws

1. When you slip up,
correct yourself
briefly and
move on

When I
first met
Lilly she was
— I mean Aidan, he
was literally doing
a handstand
on a skateboard.

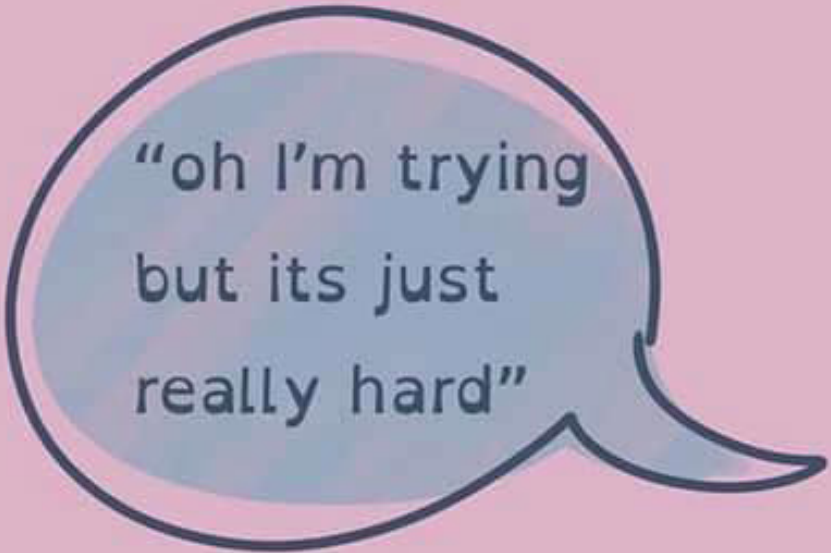

tai.draws

how to do better at Getting
New Pronouns
Right

no more

“oh I’m trying
but its just
really hard”

tai.draws

7. Don't make them alleviate your guilt

If you get it wrong do not apologise profusely, because that puts the other person in the position of having to say it's ok, and putting their own feelings aside to make you feel better / stop apologising

Express your love and learn

6. Don't make anyone feel like a burden for having pronouns you're struggling with

do not say
"oh it's just
really hard"

Thank you for sharing
your authentic self with me, I'm learning and I really appreciate it

2. When someone
corrects you, say
“thank you”

and just
move on
swiftly

I hadn't even
finished yet and he already —

they

right, thanks!
they had already
gotten & ready !?!

4. For every time
you get it wrong,
do it right 3 times

like saying
3 compliments

(it doesn't have to be aloud)

I should go
pick up Jackson—
Oh shoot! Jax

Their name is Jax;
They have been exceptionally
patient with me today;
and they are wearing lovely
earrings

3. Get in the habit of interrupting people with a quick correction

yes,
every time

It sets a good precedent,
lifts some burden off trans people,
and makes it easier to catch yourself

5. Consider meeting with someone to practice

Go for coffee with a mutual friend and correct each other until you get it

So her pronouns are they/them —
Wait their pronouns

Totally!

We really have to practice, so we can get this right for them